The JUNIATA COLLEGE BULLETIN is published three times per year (October, February and July). Second Class Postage paid at Huntingdon, PA 16652. Send Form 3579 to Juniata College, 17th and Moore Streets, Huntingdon, PA 16652.

Juniata College is an independent, privately supported coeducational institution committed to providing a liberal arts education to qualified students regardless of sex, race, religion, creed, color or handicap. Its policies comply with requirements of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Title IX of the Education Admendments of 1972, and all other applicable federal, state and local statutes, regulations and guidelines.

President's Report 1983-84

The preparation of this annual report gives me an opportunity to review and evaluate the work of the College and the importance of higher education. If we are to continue to prosper and serve as an example for the rest of the world, we must have a well educated populace.

Since its founding, Juniata College has served to prepare students "for the useful occupations of life." But we have gone even further, encouraging them to strive for excellence in their personal and professional lives. And we have been successful!

As the following report indicates, 1983-84 was an excellent year and the future looks even brighter. The challenges that lie ahead will be met with the help of all Juniatians.

College Advancement

I am very pleased to report that for the sixth consecutive year, total giving to the College increased, surpassing the $1.5 million mark in 1983-84. Some 3,400 alumni, approximately 43% of the alumni population, gave this year, emphasizing again the overwhelming support Juniata receives from its alumni.

The 15th Annual Support Fund Campaign, with a goal of $225,000, was successfully completed with alumni contributing $119,902 of the $225,326 total. I want to extend my sincere thanks to Glenn P. Holsinger '47 of Huntingdon who served as this year's Annual Support Fund chairman. He and his many alumni volunteers did an excellent job.

Although alumni contribute the largest portion of the Annual Support Fund, I also want to thank the many foundations, businesses, industries, college friends, Church of the Brethren congregations and the Juniata Parents Association for their gifts.

One of the highlights of the 1983-84 year was the receipt of a $250,000 challenge grant from The Pew Memorial Trust for the purchase of new academic computer equipment.

Under the terms of this grant, the college is committed to raising $125,000 in the fiscal years 1983-84 and 1984-85. We satisfied the first half of the requirement thanks to the generous support of corporations, foundations, alumni and college friends. A $15,000 grant from the Charles A. Frueauff Foundation of New York was particularly helpful in meeting the $125,000 goal.

Raising the additional $125,000 will be a major goal for fiscal 1984-85. With the support of our many constituencies, we should have the second phase of this drive completed by mid-1985. Once completed, The Pew Memorial Trust Grant and the matching funds will equal one-half of the $1 million computerization campaign.

A three-year, $150,000 matching grant also has been received from The Whitaker Foundation for the acquisition of scientific equipment. Under the terms of this grant, the College will raise $100,000 in each of the next three fiscal years to match the three $50,000 annual installments from the foundation. When successfully completed, this capital project will bring $450,000 to Juniata for its scientific instrumentation needs.

The Century II Campaign, which continues until 1990, has targeted endowment, program enrichment and academic equipment as its major goals in the coming years. When the campaign was launched in 1980, the original goal was set at $13 million. In order to meet our future needs, I recommended to the Board of Trustees that the goal be raised to $20 million. This proposal has been accepted.

I took this step for several reasons. After five years, I am pleased to report that we have exceeded earlier projections and have received more than $10 million in commitments. In addition, the College is looking to provide itself with additional financial flexibility and increased educational opportunities by expanding available scholarship funds, enhancing academic resources and developing new programs throughout the curriculum. By expanding the goal of the Century II Campaign, we have a remarkable opportunity to advance Juniata's stature even further.

The huge success of the Kennedy Sports + Recreation Center phase of the campaign has given us the confidence needed to undertake this new challenge. With your help, we will meet this challenge together and guarantee that future generations of Juniata students will receive the finest education available.

Admissions and Retention

Juniata began its 109th academic year September 3 with 1170 full time students on campus. Included in this figure are 370 new freshmen, an increase of 20 over last year, and 20 transfer students. In addition, 30 Juniata students are studying abroad on Juniata exchange programs and 13 part time are here on campus, placing the total registry at 1213 students. This figure is 60 less than last year, due mainly to large graduating classes (300 in '83 and 286 in '84) and smaller freshmen classes.

This year's freshman class includes two National Merit Scholars, bringing the total number on campus to eight. In addition, several Juniata students have received Scholars in Education Awards from the Pennsylvania Higher Education Assistance Agency (PHEAA). Established in 1983, these awards were created to encourage highly qualified math and science students to become teachers after graduating from college.

Three Juniata students, Danielle M. Rupp '87, Susan R. Fuss '85 and Roxann Binner '84, were among the first 94 students to receive the awards. Miss Rupp was the highest scholastically ranked freshman nominee for the 1983-84 awards. Three new Juniata freshmen, Gina R. Mummert, Donna L. Schorr and Karen L. Whitefield have received Scholars in Education Awards for 1984-85 while Miss Rupp and Miss Fuss have had their awards renewed.

Our retention rate at Juniata remains high. Seventy percent of the members of the class of 1984 who began their freshman year here were graduated. Compared to the national average of 55%, Juniata does very well. This high percentage has been consistent over the years since we have continued to remain selective in admissions. This selectivity is underscored by the fact that our average SAT scores remain in the 1040-1050 range. In addition, Juniata is one of 300 colleges and universities in the country listed in the publication, Peterson's Competitive Colleges.

Student Services

A college education is not limited to concepts taught in classrooms, laboratories and libraries. Experiences in residence halls, meeting rooms and on the athletic fields are educational as well. Thus, the educational goals of Juniata College are addressed jointly by programs and services in the Academic Affairs and Student Services departments.

Juniata is distinguished by both the level and quality of participation in our co-curricular program. Traditional events like Mountain Day, Madrigal Dinner and All Class Night have grown and improved while newer efforts like educational programs in residence halls have flourished. Launched on a pilot basis in 1981-82, work on the Co-Curricular Transcript (CCT) has progressed. This program provides structure for co-curricular learnings and a format for recording skill development.

A Peer Advising network was started last fall to offer new students support and an upperclass perspective on educational decisions they will be making. This year, peer advisers will be trained in using our newly acquired computer assisted career planning system.

The efforts of our Committee on Alcohol Study and Education (CASE) were recognized this year when an interassociation task force awarded the group a grant to support further work in this important area.

Students learn from other students about responsibility, citizenship, adult relationships and independent thought and action. We have excellent teachers for these important, life-long lessons.

Academic Affairs

The opening of the new Academic Computer Center in the former Brumbaugh Science Center library has enhanced our academic programs, providing both students and faculty with new educational tools.

This fall, the College's new computerized writing laboratory opened, providing diagnostic and professional assistance to students. Any professor may refer a student to the writing laboratory for help. Each student will be evaluated and undergo a prescribed writing improvement program.

Dr. Luise Van Keuren, assistant professor of English, is serving as interim director of the writing laboratory which consists of a variety of computer terminals and software. Some of this software was purchased from the U.S. Air Force Academy.

Each year, more students are expressing an interest in studying abroad for all or part of their junior year. We continue to encourage qualified students to participate in our junior year abroad program and foreign student exchange.

To underscore the importance of these programs, Dr. William C. Vocke, associate professor of political science, has agreed to assume the duties of director of international programs. One of his main projects this year will be the implementation of an exchange program with the University of Leeds in England.

Under this program, Juniata will serve as the Leeds representative for all American college students interested in studying there. The students will apply to Juniata for admission into the Leeds program. Our staff, under Dr. Vocke's direction, will screen the applicants, and recommend the most qualified students to Leeds. The only American students who would not have to apply through Juniata are those attending institutions that already have a direct exchange program with Leeds.

This unique program brings Juniata into direct partnership with one of the finest universities in England. By entering into this project, officials at Leeds are voicing their confidence in our academic judgment and strength.

Exchange programs at Juniata are not limited to students. Quite often, members of our faculty have the opportunity to teach and conduct research abroad.

In July, Dr. J. Peter Trexler, professor of geology and department chairman, returned to Juniata after spending three months teaching and studying at the University of Edinburgh. With one of the finest geology departments in Great Britain, Dr. Trexler's stay at Edinburgh gave him the opportunity to work with some of the most distinguished paleontologists in the world. In addition, he made several field trips to classic geological sites, many of which were used by 18th century geologist James Hutton, known as the father of modern geology.

There is no doubt our geology students will benefit from Dr. Trexler's visit to Edinburgh. Other departments have good news to share as well.

As part of its undergraduate scholarship program, the Dow Chemical Company foundation has established a chemistry scholarship at the College. This generous program provides $6,000 a year for four years, designating $5,000 for scholarships and $1,000 for educational programs within the chemistry department. Juniata is one of only 40 institutions in the country selected by Dow for this scholarship program.

I am also pleased to announce that a $30,000 grant from the National Science Foundation has been awarded to Juniata for a study of invertebrate animals living in fresh water limestone springs in Central Pennsylvania.

This research project is being led by Dr. James L. Gooch, professor of biology and Dr. Douglas S. Glazier, associate professor of biology with assistance from students Timothy A. Lacey '85 and Donna F. Myers '85.

Financial Affairs, Pricing and Aid

Juniata is a sound institution, not only academically but financially. Our 1983-84 budget was balanced at $12.4 million with a small surplus as an added bonus. The College's projected budget for 1984-85 will be approximately $12.7 million, up some 2% from last year. Our tradition of careful management and prudent financial policies will continue.

Although tuition, room and board continues to increase and represents a large portion of the operating budget, Juniata's pricing remains very competitive. In fact, Juniata will be listed in the upcoming edition of The New York Times Guide to Best Buys in Higher Education.

Although fees have increased, so has the amount of financial aid provided by the College. For 1984-85 we estimate that some 850 Juniata students will receive about $2 million in grants and scholarships. More than $1.1 million of that amount will come directly from College funds. Approximately $850,000 of the latter amount comes from the operating budget while $200,000 is from endowment.

Many of our students will again receive grants from the Pennsylvania Higher Education Assistance Agency while others will receive assistance through campus employment and Guaranteed Student Loans.

Concluding Comments

Many of you have felt the excitement evident on campus during the 1983-84 year. Well, 1984-85 will be even more exciting!

Over the years, I have worked with many dedicated individuals who share in the Juniata success story. The members of the Board of Trustees, alumni, faculty and staff, students and other friends have worked together to make Juniata an excellent institution of higher education.

The challenges that lie ahead of us will be met with your continued support and generous service to the College. Juniata will continue to serve students for generations to come. We will be remembered for the job we do today. Juniata's future is in our hands.

FOUNDERS CLUB

Since its origin in 1939, the Founders Club has had as its special mission the development of leadership gifts which are essential to the advancement of the educational effectiveness of Juniata College. In 1983-84, the Founders Club claimed some 1130 members in four categories of annual membership: The Presidents Circle, open to those who contribute $1,000 or more; the Patrons Circle, for those who contribute $500 to $999; the Associates Circle, $250 to $499; and the Builders Circle, $100 to $249.

The College recognizes with pride the significance of support generated by Founders Club membership. The example set by these dedicated men and women not only helps to assure directly Juniata's present educational excellence, but inspires others — including foundations, corporations and government — to realize that support of Juniata is a sound investment. You are cordially invited to join these other Juniataans as members of the Founders Club, an organization held in special esteem by all who are associated with the College.

 Juniata College
 Hereby give public expression to their Profound Gratitude and Esteem
 for

Those who have established
 Significant Endowments
 in Support of Teaching and Cultural Events

These endowments enable Juniata to emphasize teaching as the essential element in liberal arts education. The quality of learning by Juniata students is advanced for all the years to come by these benefactions.

The Herbert A. and Marjorie F. Miller Endowment in Support of Teaching in Economics and Business Administration and a second major gift to purchase books and journals in these two fields of study.

The Edith B. Wertz Endowment for Support of Cultural Events.

The J. Omar Good Visiting Distinguished Professorship of Evangelical Christianity

Joseph R. and Jane S. Good Endowment in Support of Scholarships.

Dr. John C. and Elizabeth E. Baker Endowment in Support of Peace Studies.

W. Newton and Hazel A. Long Professorship in History.

The Board of Trustees has approved a plan for the recognition of major endowment gifts. Recognizing that liberal arts education depends upon sound teaching, the Trustees, give special recognition to gifts of $100,000 or more. These may be direct gifts, bequests or gift annuities in which the actual amount available for support of teaching through endowment in perpetuity is of the amount stipulated. These major gifts are recognized here, through presentation of special citations to the donors, and through bronze plaques which are placed in the classroom areas occupied by the designated departments.

GIFT ANNUITY AND POOLED INCOME AGREEMENTS — $571,134.76

By means of deferred gifts, friends of Juniata are able to support the College through gift annuities and life income contracts. In these plans the donor receives a lifetime income with distinct tax advantages. During the fiscal year 1983-84, a total of $571,134.76 was contributed by the following persons:

Cox, Mrs. Edith L.
 Ellis, Dr. & Mrs. Charles C.
 Foster, Mrs. Eleanor R.
 Hoddinott, Mrs. Charles J.
 Kennedy, Mr. Edwin L.
 Neff, Dr. Wilfred B.
 Weimer, Mr. James

FRIENDS OF THE JUNIATA LIBRARY

College constituents who have a special interest in library development support the Friends of Juniata Library organization. During 1983-84, persons named below made contributions to assure the continued strength of the general collection housed in the Beeghly Library and of the science collection located in the Myers Science Library of the Brumbaugh Science Center. Members listed are in one or more of the following three categories: contributors of cash; donors of books appraised for gift-in-kind credit; those who gave books but did not request appraisal. As the Libraries' total collection approaches 200,000 volumes, the Friends' organization is invaluable to the assurance of sound quality and steady growth.

ADVICE FROM DISTINGUISHED PROFESSORS

By Dr. James J. Lakso

Professor of Economics and Business Administration and recipient of the annual Beachley Distinguished Professor Award

Adam Smith, widely regarded as the father of modern economics for The Wealth of Nations, was a bundle of contradictions. For example, he argued that government should permit individual businessmen to pursue their own self-interest free of regulation and control. He argued for this policy in spite of the fact that he had a fairly low regard for the morals of businessmen in general. In a widely quoted passage from The Wealth of Nations, he says, "People of the same trade seldom meet together, even for merriment and diversion, but the conversation ends in a conspiracy against the public, or in some contrivance to raise prices." His point is that if government leaves the affairs of business to businessmen, then businessmen won't be able to use the government to pursue their own interests at the expense of the interest of the public. It is not Smith's laissez-faire philosophy that I want to discuss, but rather his views on the effects of job specialization on human beings. This, like his view on businessmen, also seems contradictory.

The mainspring of economic progress was, for Smith, the increased productivity which comes with specialization and division of labor. This was an insight which proved to be an important element of 19th-century liberalism. The argument for free trade internationally and laissez-faire domestically follows logically from the obvious point that division of labor is limited, in Smith's words, "... by the extent of the market." Wider markets permit increased specialization. Increased specialization enhances productivity and increases national output; that is, division of labor increases The Wealth of Nations. Given this emphasis on specialization and division of labor, however, it is hard to reconcile this policy with what Smith regards as the consequences of specialization on the condition of individual workers. In a very dark passage, he says, "But the understandings of the greater part of men are necessarily formed by their ordinary employments. The man whose whole life is spent in performing a few simple operations ... has no occasion to exert his understanding or to exercise his invention. ... He naturally loses, therefore, the habit of such exertion, and generally becomes as stupid and ignorant as it is possible for a human creature to become. The torpor of his mind renders him not only incapable of relishing or bearing a part in any rational conversation, but of conceiving any generous, noble, or tender sentiment, and consequently of forming any just judgment concerning many even of the ordinary duties of private life." The great contradiction, of course, is that while Smith links specialization to progress, he maintains that this progress will make most working people "... as stupid and ignorant as it is possible for a human creature to become." Some progress!

This passage itself, apart from its contradictory nature in the context of The Wealth of Nations, is very insightful. I interpret Smith to mean that you are what you do. The level of your mental activity is set by the opportunities you give yourself to express your own creative thinking. If you confine yourself to dull repetitive tasks, you will become "... as dull and stupid as it is possible for a human creature to become." Keep in mind that Smith wrote this over two hundred years ago. Twentieth-century observers of the modern assembly line are saying pretty much the same thing two hundred years after Smith's observation.

There is another sense in which you are what you do. Most of us don't read minds. Our judgments of people are formed by what we see them do because we can't see them think. What you become obviously depends in part on the judgments which other people make of you, which, in turn, are formed on the basis of what they see you do. We grade what you write on exams, not what you intend to write. That is obvious. It is not obvious to you, however, that we frequently see you look at your watch, cut classes, fall asleep, yawn frequently and sometimes loudly, and sometimes cheat. There has not yet been an outbreak of classroom belching, but I expect it by 1990. Two questions we frequently hear are, "I can't be in class today, are we going to do anything?", and "Is it O.K. if my paper is late?". Not all students behave in this way, of course, at least not all the time, and our judgments are based on positive things we have seen as well as the negative aspects of classroom behavior. I do believe that much classroom behavior is, however, simply rude, and that most students would do themselves a favor by paying more attention to the messages they send with that behavior.

You are what you do is as true for professors and administrators as it is for students. In my years at Juniata, I have heard faculty claim that breadth of exposure is an important part of education; yet many of them confine their own activities to a narrowly defined set. I have observed an administration claim that academic advising is an integral part of the responsibility of all faculty, yet fail to reward it or formally recognize it in any meaningful way. I have observed an awards convocation that recognizes scholastic and athletic performance as if they were equally important, but pays no attention to performance in music, theater or art. Perhaps we should all consider the simple advice of Professor Smith. We are what we do.

John Maynard Keynes offered in 1936 the philosophical and economic justification which helped topple the dominance of laissez-faire ideology in economics. Keynes was bold enough to assert that correct policy would make it possible to eliminate the business cycle and consequently abolish poverty in a few generations. In an essay called "Economic Possibilities for our Grandchildren," he says, "I draw the conclusion that . . . the economic problem may be solved, or at least within sight of solution, within a hundred years." I am not going to pursue the truth or falsity of that assertion, but rather would like to draw attention to the consequences of the assertion. Keynes says that when the economic problem is solved, ". . . for the first time since his creation man will be faced with his real, his permanent problem — how to use his freedom from pressing economic cares, how to occupy the leisure, which science and compound interest will have won for him, to live wisely and agreeably and well." Further he says, "But it will be those peoples, who can keep alive, and cultivate into a fuller perfection, the art of life itself and do not sell themselves for the means of life, who will be able to enjoy the abundance when it comes." In short, we can only live well when we do not sell ourselves in order to live.

While the fullness of Keynes' prediction may not be realized, he does point out that in the process of economic development, work becomes less important and leisure more important as the factor which lets us live ". . . wisely and agreeably and well." In the future, time spent on the job will occupy less of your time and serve to define the meaning of your life less than it has for the generations who have worked before you. The reasons for this are complex, and include changes in the nature of work, the use of educational credentials as screening devices by employers and demographics. What people do for income will be less important and how they occupy their leisure will be more important as the defining characteristic of their lives.

We have all heard the phrase, "meaningful work." It suggests, in part, that work gives meaning to life. If my assumptions about changes in the market place and Keynes' vision of capitalism are at all correct, we may have to begin thinking seriously about the phrase "meaningful leisure." I'm hard pressed to say what that is. It is not something we talk about much in higher education. The mission statement of this institution speaks of the "useful occupations of life." My guess is that this faculty would have a hard time agreeing on the meaning of that phrase, let alone agreeing on "meaningful leisure."

For years, faculty in the humanities have resisted the idea that the humanities were not career disciplines. They resisted that idea for good reasons. It suggested that they were second-class citizens because important things were assumed to come from work and career. That is what was important. Non-career related implied secondary status. If what we do with our leisure time becomes increasingly important as the activity which defines our lives, this objection becomes unfounded. I hope we can look to the humanities for the definition of meaningful leisure. Smith and Keynes seem to have come together here. Smith suggests that "we are what we do," while Keynes adds that to live "wisely and agreeably and well," we will have to do much more than work.

To an economist, talk of work leads inevitably to talk of wages. If we thought about wages much, I think we would agree that there is no connection between wages and importance. High wages do not mean you are important any more than low wages mean you are not important. This is so obvious that it hardly seems worth saying, yet I think many wage discussions seem to assume there is some connection between wages and importance. There is not. As Arthur Okun says in Equality and Efficiency, "Moreover, people understand the relativism of market rewards, and do not confuse the market's verdict with heaven's verdict. . . . Many participants now measure their success in dimensions other than money incomes. Harvard professors hardly feel inferior to the president of U.S. Steel. Nor do sculptors feel inferior to college professors. The same self respect can extend to good landscape gardeners and good plumbers, to mothers who prefer full-time home management, and to those who delegate home management in order to earn paychecks. Society can run contests without adding frustration, so long as people engage in many contests and use many criteria to judge their own contributions."

Economists know that wages, on average, are determined by supply and demand. This will be true in the long run even if we try to design public policy as if it were not true. High wages are a sign that the demand for a particular set of skills is high relative to the supply. Low wages are a sign that the opposite is true. In some cases, the demand is high relative to supply because the supply can be controlled. This explains the high wages of doctors. While it is true that doctors earn more than English professors, it is not true that doctors are more important than English professors. It means that the supply of doctors has been subject to the control of the AMA, while English professors have been unable to control their supply.

In other cases, the demand is high relative to the supply because the demand for output produced with a certain set of skills is high. This accounts for the current high salaries of people with good computer skills. In the most distressing case I know, the demand for college professors is going to fall relative to the supply because of lousy demographics. The average real wage of college professors in the next 15 years is going to decline. Saying this doesn't make me happy. Wages and salaries are determined by the continued shifts of supply and demand in response to demographics, technology, public tastes, and in some cases, public policy over which individuals have little or no control.

Since individuals have little control over the actual forces which determine their wages, it is hardly fitting either to praise them for high wages or blame them for low wages. Even occupational choice is a crapshoot, as aerospace engineers found in the 1970s, and many college faculty will find in the 1980s. This is, after all, simply another way of saying that your wage and your worth are separate items. People who argue that college professors should be paid more because they do an important job are guilty of confusing one with the other; that is, with saying wages measure importance. If it is true that high wages do not mean you have an important job, it is also true that having an important job does not mean you should have higher pay. Who, after all, does not believe that his or her job is not important?

The comparable pay doctrine is another example of the confusion which surrounds salary discussions. The proponents of comparable pay argue that occupations which require similar amounts of training or responsibility, measured in some manner, ought to receive comparable pay. This should be so, according to proponents, regardless of the level of demand for the occupation or the number of persons wishing to pursue that occupation at the level of comparable pay established by (who?). The main objective of the proposal is to raise the average income of women to a level approximating the average income of men. It has been referred to as "the feminist issue of the '80s." It will not work. Indeed, it may make the income problem of women worse rather than better. Labor market research shows that average pay for women is less than average pay for men because women have continued to be crowded into occupations where demand is weak relative to supply. If wages are made higher in those occupations, by decree, on the basis of the principle of comparability, this would serve both to increase the flow of people into these already crowded occupations and to reduce demand in those areas. This would result in higher pay for those who continued to be employed in the occupation, but no pay at all, or work in other occupations for which they had not prepared, for others. On this basis, it is difficult to say what would happen to average pay.

The reasons for the continued occupation crowding are complex and are not something that economists have much to say about. It is clear, however, that the consequences of trying to set wages on the basis of comparability, independently of considerations of supply and demand, will produce results which proponents of comparable pay do not intend. The average pay of women will rise as they are distributed occupationally and across industries in a manner more similar to the distribution of men. The way to raise the average pay of women is to knock down the barriers which prevent that occupational redistribution. This will not be easy, as some of those barriers are erected for women at a very early age and perhaps in ways which we do not yet fully understand. Setting wages by decree in a way which ignores market forces may serve only to perpetuate the consequences of the existing occupational choices. The attempt to solve the problem in this way is a further example of the confusion of wages and worth.

If you leave Juniata and make lots of money, we should congratulate you on your good fortune. Some of you, indeed, will start at salaries higher than the salaries of many of the faculty here today. Others of you will not be so fortunate. We will not think any more of you if your salary is high or low. If, as John Maynard Keynes reminds us, there is much more to life than work, it is surely so that there is much more to life than salary. Your job and your income do not measure your importance or your worth. If there is a relationship between work and worth, it is surely that people dignify their work, not that their work dignifies them.

Adam Smith and John Maynard Keynes were distinguished professors. By any criterion that I can imagine, Martin Clark* of our sociology department was also a distinguished professor. He was scholarly, dedicated to his students and sought to apply his scholarship to the practical problems of life. Martin gave me some advice once which I would like to share with you in closing. Early in his tenure at Juniata, we had a discussion which soon became an argument. I do not remember the subject of the argument. I know it was an argument though because I was talking loudly and swearing. I discovered what I believed to be a fatal logical flaw in Martin's position and told him, not so politely, how this flaw destroyed his position and vindicated mine. There is nothing which gives an economist more pleasure than to find a logical inconsistency. We love to argue. Even more than arguing, we love to win arguments. In fact, it is probably fair to say that most economists would rather win arguments than be right. At this point in our argument, Martin said to me, quietly and earnestly, "You know, Jim, you are probably right. But you should never forget rule 11." Calmer now, I replied, "What is rule 11?" "It is," he said, "You must not take yourself too seriously." It was good advice.
